Harriet Kaplan of the Department of Audiology teaches a class during the Elderhostel Program. The program offered participants "a learning experience about what it means to have a hearing loss. It exposed them to different options," said program coordinator Todd Krock.

Peet Hall renovation nears completion

The $1 million renovation of the Elizabeth Peet Residence Hall is nearing completion, and the dormitory should be ready for occupancy before fall semester classes begin next month.

Renovation work included installing new wiring, plumbing, fixtures, a fire alarm system and a new elevator. A major portion of the renovation work centered on the installation of a heat, ventilation and air conditioning system (HVAC). With the renovation of Peet Hall, all dorms on campus are fully air conditioned.

Constructed in 1957 and dedicated to Elizabeth Peet, dean of women at Gallaudet from 1910 to 1951, the five-story building can accommodate 190 persons. It will serve as living quarters for sophomores, juniors and seniors. As with all residence halls, Peet Hall will be physically accessible to persons with mobility impairments. Last year, the mall side entrance to the building was redesigned to permit wheelchair access.

The old windows in Peet Hall were replaced with energy-saving thermal windows. The interior is now being painted and carpeting will soon be installed.

Four educators participate in retreat

Pre-College Programs Outreach hosted four educators of the deaf July 16-20 during the second annual Writers' Retreat sponsored by Perspectives magazine, which publishes information for teachers of hearing impaired students across the nation.

Selected on the basis of story outlines submitted last winter, the four teachers spent their week at Gallaudet developing and completing their articles, which will appear in Perspectives next year. Maggie Correia, the magazine's editor, offered technical assis-and Canada.

Topics presented during the workshop included: "Literacy in the U.S.: The State of the Art," by Betty Ward of the U.S. Department of Education; "Characteristics of Deaf Adult Learners," presented by Roslyn Rosen, dean of the College for Continuing Education; "Materials Development," by Leslie Proctor, a materials development specialist with PACE; "Assessment and Evaluation," by Judy Johnson of the Department of Education at Gallaudet; and "Factors Which Influence Successful Programs" by Alex Quaynor, head instructor with A.B.E.

A materials display was held in coordination with PACE.

Hearing loss in later years examined

"It gave me a more positive outlook and made me aware of means of coping with my hearing impairment. And it helped my wife (to better) understand my problem."

Vincent Giuliano had just completed the Elderhostel Program held on campus June 24-30. A resident of Philadelphia, PA, he and his wife were among 28 persons who came from across the country to participate in the program.

Giuliano's wife, Marie, called the program a valuable one, saying that until coming to Gallaudet she "never realized how difficult a hearing loss can be to live with." Exercises in lip reading, she said, brought into focus just what her husband faces each time he talks with someone.

Jean Clark, who works at the Charter Colonial Institute, a private hospital in Lee Hall, VA, said that the week-long experience helped her in her work with hard of hearing children who have behavior problems. It also helped her learn more about herself. "I'm hard of hearing and I learned more about how I feel about that—the social and psychological aspects of being hard of hearing."

"Part of it is getting people to accept you. I'm 63 and hard of hearing, and I have a fear of losing my job," she said.

"It's a comfortable feeling having the camaraderie of others in our situation."

The program was offered to persons 60 years of age and older and their spouses, and was designed for senior citizens who have begun to experience difficulties because of a recent loss of hearing. Entitled "Hearing Loss in Later Years," the program was sponsored by Programs in Adult and Community Education and was coordinated by Todd Krock, assistant to the director of PACE.

Throughout the week, classes were offered in the morning and afternoon—the first dealing with adjustment to hearing loss and the second with hearing, understanding and help.

Adjustment to hearing loss provided participants with strategies for improving communication. Personal and communication problems associated with hearing loss were discussed and related to life span adjustment. Ways of coping with those problems were then discussed and alternative communication strategies presented.

The second class—Hearing, Understanding and Help—covered normal hearing and hearing loss related to age. Discussion focused on hearing aids and how to find competent audiologists and other hearing-related resources. Hearing evaluations were also given to some of the Elderhostel participants.

Instructors for the classes were: William McFarland, chairman of the Audiology Department; Harriet Kaplan, an assistant professor in the Audiology Department; and Teena Wax, an assistant professor in the Department of Counseling.

After classes each day, participants could choose from a number of activities offered on campus. Those activities included a lecture on deaf culture by Simon Carmel, rap sessions led by Teena Wax, sign language instruction and the showing of captioned films.

Adult basic education workshop held

The Adult Basic Education Program, an office under Programs in Adult and Community Education (PACE), sponsored its third annual workshop entitled "Working with Disadvantaged Deaf Adults" June 25-27.

Designed for teachers and administrators of A.B.E. programs to provide suggestions and share information on how to meet the needs of individual students within class structures, the workshop was conducted by Nancy Pollock, an Adult Basic Education (A.B.E.) specialist.

Twenty-three participants represented programs involving basic education, independent living and General Education Degree instruction from 15 states

Crafts exhibition on display at Ely

An exhibition of crafts by a Swedish craftswoman will be on display in the Art Gallery in Ely Center now through Labor Day. The works of Kristin Soderlund have come to Gallaudet following their exhibition at the American-Swedish Institute in Minneapolis, MN.

Each picture on display was created from natural sheep's wool which the artist cards and then dyes with colors she makes from natural ingredients such as roots, leaves and berries. Many of the pictures represent Swedish scenes.

The pictures are available for sale, and a portion of the purchase price of each work will be donated by the artist to the "Ole Jim" Fund. Anyone interested in purchasing a picture should contact Lolly Gilbert, Bobbie Virvan or Mike Kaika in the Office of Alumni and Public Relations at x5100 or x5108 (TDD).

Mrs. Soderlund is the mother of Stefan Soderlund, who was an exchange student at MSSD through the AFS Program two years ago.

dination with the A.B.E. workshop in the Art Gallery of Ely Center. Both Gallaudet and commercial printers had on display print- and computer-assisted instructional materials ranging from non-reading levels to preparation for the General Education Degree.

PACE also hosted a Materials Development Workshop for nine participants from across the nation and Canada. Conducted by Leslie Proctor, the workshop was held June 18-22 for teachers working on educational materials.

Materials were developed on cooking, grammar, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, testing, community forms, appointments and sign communication. The materials developed will be included in the A.B.E. teachers' resource book, "Basically Yours," to be published this fall.
