First Presidential Awards fund 32 projects

Thirty-two projects proposed by College and Pre-College faculty members will be funded through the first Presidential Awards program.

The awards program was announced last fall by Gallaudet President Jerry C. Lee, who stated that the program is aimed in part at stimulating interest in identifying projects or formulating ideas which could contribute to quality academic programming and encouraging faculty members' active participation in such work.

"Often times the pursuit of a creative idea that could enhance Gallaudet's academic mission must be delayed, postponed or cancelled because of inadequate funding. Departmental budgets may not be able to absorb expenses beyond those incurred or projected for regular program needs," Lee explained. "While external grant sources may be pursued, the competition is very keen and the project scope, in most cases, must impact beyond the walls of Gallaudet College."

The annual Presidential Awards program was created to address that issue. Out of more than 60 applications submitted by College and Pre-College faculty members, the following faculty members received funding for their proposals:

- Marcia Montgomery, to design instructional packages to enhance the communications skills of hearing impaired high school students;
- Fred A. Noel, for a proposal to provide students with experience in theatre management;
- Ken Kurlychek, to identify and evaluate software products having potential impact on hearing impaired students;
- Heidi Dexheimer and Betty Waddy-Smith, to develop a public information program with the American Society for Deaf Children;

- Pamela Qualls, to provide clinically proven tools for the analysis of biofeedback of speech and voice characteristics;

- Arsena Strange and N. Naomi Zowader, to develop an entry level computer course for deaf students;
- Wilton McMillan, Dale Ford, Beth Benedict and Catherine Wilson, to develop materials to assist deaf children in expanding their vocabularies and expressing their emotions and feelings;
- Richard Lytle and James Vincent, to adapt and pilot test social skills training procedures;
- Michael L. Moore, to design a pilot project offering courses in the area of business and food service management through the School of Preparatory Studies;
- Frances R. Croft and Kenneth Epstein, to develop a critical thinking skills program;
- Barbara Williams, to develop a summer cued speech interpreter training program;
- Harriet Kaplan and James Fernandes, to develop a service program to train individuals in the use of various communication-assistive devices;
- Scott K. Liddell, to develop a data bank of phonological-type information about American Sign Language;
- Gina Oliva, to offer an Elderhostel program with the Peabody Institute at Johns Hopkins University;
- Trent Batson, for a project to train faculty to teach English through a computer networking system;
- Catherine Ingold and John Christiansen, for a pilot program for a federated learning community;

- John Van Cleve and Berry Crouch, to develop a one-semester course on deaf history;
- King Jordan, to conduct research on the use of sign language by non-deaf handicapped children;

Eagles chosen 1984 Deaf Prep National Champs

The MSSD football team was chosen by the Deaf American as the Deaf Prep National Champions for the 1984 season. The selection was made by a vote taken from coaches of deaf high school teams across the country.

The Eagles dethroned the 1983 champion team from the Indiana School for the Deaf and edged out the team from the Alabama School for the Deaf, which placed second. This is the fourth championship the MSSD team has won under the direction of coach Bob Westermann. The team was picked by the Deaf American as the champs for the 1979, 1980 and 1981 football seasons. The 1984 season was Westermann's last coaching the high school team. He is now head coach of the College's football team.

The criteria used by coaches in choosing the Deaf National Prep Champions included the team's overall record (MSSD had eight wins, one loss and one tie) and scores against other deaf high school teams. They also considered how teams finished in any local conference to which they belonged. MSSD captured second place in the Tri-State Athletic Conference. Last year the Eagles won first place.
