ENERGY CONSERVATION RESPONSE

--Submitted by Cheryl Shevlin, KDES:

"I read your "On the Green" regularly and I enjoy them. You mentioned about energy conservation tips from Jim Hull in yesterdays' (April 10) Green. I have made several complaints to the Physical Plant about the overheating problem in our Home Economics room on the second floor in Fowler Hall. The complaints have been made ever since last fall. Nothing has been done about it. The radiators are still on full blast even during hot days. Can you give this problem your attention? I would appreciate your help. We don't even need radiators on at all even during the winter!"

Comments are welcome.

ENERGY CONSERVATION TIPS FROM JIM HULL

"Thinking about buying a room air-conditioner? Consider the advantages of selecting a unit with a higher energy efficiency ratio. The E.E.R. number appears on a sticker or tag affixed to the machine. Higher E.E.R. ratings help hold down on your electric bill. Install room air-conditioning units on the shady side of your house. They'll operate more efficiently and use less electricity."

LOVE LETTER

The following excerpt is from The Georgetown newspaper:

"Dear Editor:

This is my 'Love Letter' to the people in Washington, D.C.

"I came here over a month ago from Oregon; and I just want everybody to know how I feel about them and about our nation's capitol . . . Earlene Cunningham, employee at Gallaudet College where I am learning American Sign Language, gave me a hearty welcome on my first day of school there. . . Michael Creech, graduate student at Gallaudet, who takes time to explain language signs to a struggling student. . . Mike Woodford and Steve Coriell, Gallaudet and Catholic University sign instructors, who make signing the most beautiful art in the world."
