Management Institute offers new programs

Professionals seeking to sharpen their leadership and management skills may be interested in two new programs offered this fall by the School of Management's Management Institute.

The programs, primarily for deaf and hard of hearing people who want more opportunities for career advancement and job satisfaction, are being held in cooperation with the Extension Institute of the American Management Association (AMA) and Howard University's Small Business Development Center.

Completing six courses in the management program leads to an AMA certificate in management. There is no time limit for completing the program.

The Business Start-up Certificate Program, which provides the basic skills and planning techniques needed by budding entrepreneurs, starts Oct. 3.

The Management Institute also offers seminars and short courses in the areas of microcomputer applications, small business development, and the Center for Management and Leadership. In addition, professionals can work with outside business and government organizations through the Management Institute's Contract Training Center.

A 15 percent discount is available for Gallaudet employees wishing to register for the Management Institute's fall programs. For registration information and a copy of the catalog, call x5424 (V/TDD) or x5900 (TDD), or come by the School of Management's Offices, West Office Building, Room S6.

Bison aim for ACFC championship as homecoming weekend draws near Gallaudet's homecoming weekend is set for Oct. 12-13 on Kendall Green.

The Bison will play St. John Fisher College of Rochester, N.Y., on Oct. 13, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Head coach Rich Pelletier and the football team will make a bid for their third consecutive Atlantic Collegiate Football Conference (ACFC) championship. Pelletier was named ACFC Co-Coach of the Year in 1989 as he led the Bison to a 7-3 overall record and a 4-1 conference mark. The Bison shared the conference title with St. John Fisher.

The homecoming weekend will begin with a pep rally on Friday, Oct. 12, at 7 p.m. in the Field House. The pre-game celebration for alumni and friends will be held in "Ole Jim" from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission is $5.

On Saturday, Oct. 13, the Class of '65 will hold a silver anniversary breakfast in "Ole Jim" from 8 to 10 a.m. For reservations, call Mary Anne Pugin, x5061. Immediately following the breakfast will be the first annual Bison Booster Club Tailgate party on Faculty Row, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Gallaudet and the American School for the Deaf also will have a tailgate party at the KDES parking lot beginning at 11 a.m. For more information, call Jane Kuzoian, x5269.

Following the football game on Hotchkiss Field, "Ole Jim" will open for its traditional Post-Game Bash from 4 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission is $10 and includes hot hors d'oeuvres, and other munchies.

The homecoming ball will be held the evening of Oct. 13 in the Hyatt Regency Washington Hotel from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. and includes a disc jockey, dancing, entertainment, and hors d'oeuvres. Tickets can be purchased on Oct. 1 and 3 for $28 in the Ely Art Exhibit Room; Oct. 2 and 4 for $28 in the Ely Multipurpose Room; and Oct. 8 through 11 for $30 in the Ely Art Exhibit Room.

The Gallaudet community is reminded that aside from homecoming-related activities, no University Week will take place this year. University Week will be held in 1991, the fifth anniversary of Gallaudet's becoming a university, and every five years thereafter.

New catalog database demo set for Oct. 10

A new information network that will allow users to tap into the library catalogs of seven other member libraries of the Washington Research Library Consortium (WRLC) will be introduced to the Gallaudet community on Wednesday, Oct. 10.

Gallaudet President I. King Jordan will perform the first official catalog search of the ALADIN (Access to Library and Database Information Network) at an opening ceremony at the information desk in the Merrill Learning Center at 10 a.m. on Oct. 10. A reception and information session on ALADIN and the WRLC will follow in room LN-11. Both events are open to everyone on campus.

Demonstrations of the system will be given that afternoon and the rest of the week to all interested faculty, staff, and students. People interested in demonstrations can sign up at the information desk during the Oct. 10 event.

ALADIN, a database of library catalogs from the eight member libraries of the Washington Research Library Consortium, will give Gallaudet access to a substantial portion of the library holdings of other WRLC members: American University, Catholic University, George Mason University, George Washington University, Georgetown University, Marymount University, and The University of the District of Columbia.

While each library currently has a substantial portion of its holdings in the ALADIN database, it does not yet include the complete holdings of the member libraries. Records are being created to make all the current holdings of member libraries available.

By the end of the semester, all WRLC libraries should have ALADIN catalogs available for public use, and by the end of 1991, all of the libraries will be circulating books using the ALADIN system. When the circulation system is put into use, ALADIN users at Gallaudet can locate the books they want and also find out if they have been checked out by another library user.

Under the current WRLC policy, Gallaudet faculty, staff, and graduate students with a valid consortium card can borrow materials directly from any WRLC library. In the future, the consortium also plans to extend these borrowing privileges to undergraduates.

Other special guests at the opening ceremony will include Provost Harvey Corson, Vice president for Administration and Business Paul Kelly, Director of Computer Services Kevin Casey, and WRLC President and Chief Executive Officer Paul Vassallo.

President King Jordan and Linda Jordan show off the newest resident of House One—their new Dalmatian puppy, "Sophie," named in honor of Sophia Fowler Gallaudet, mother of Edward Miner Gallaudet. The Jordans' 10-year-old Dalmatian, Rufus, died recently.

NW intramural director instills love of sports

Sports have always played a central role in life for Kris Gould, who recently became Northwest Campus' first full-time intramural sports director after working with the program part time.

Growing up in the Denver, Colo., suburbs, Gould, the only hard of hearing member of his family, and his six brothers were always involved in sports. Gould said that although his hearing loss presented a barrier for him, the discipline, teamwork, and personal satisfaction of sports participation were—and continue to be—primary motivators in his life.

"I guess [participating in] sports is what keeps me going," said Gould. "It's what helped to keep me in school" and earn an academic degree, he added.

About one-third of the students enrolled at the campus participate in the various extracurricular sports activities, and many staff and faculty also take advantage of the program.

Although Gould developed the guidelines for the intramurals program, which recently became a unit of Student Life, he gives students the opportunity to help run it, and he gives them credit for contributing to its success.

Gould's confidence in the students is partly responsible for the students electing him as "Outstanding Staff Person of the Year" at Northwest Campus for the past two years, said Health and Physical Education Department Chairwoman Maria Waters.

"Kris is always there for the students," said Waters. "It's more than a job for him; he'll do whatever extra is necessary for them."

When he came to Gallaudet as an undergraduate, Gould played on the baseball, soccer, and basketball teams while working on his degree in secondary education. When his eligibility to play collegiate sports expired, he stayed involved in sports by working as an athletic trainer, helping to prevent sports-related injuries.

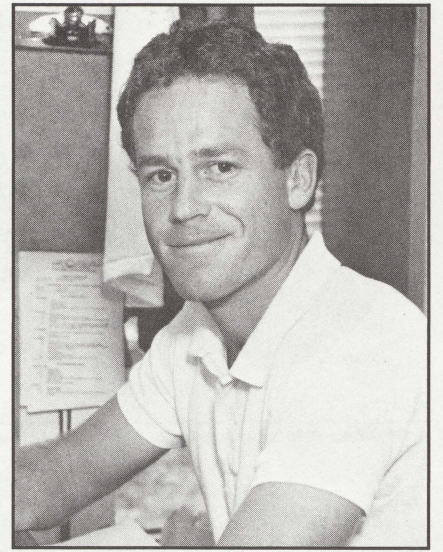

After Gould graduated in 1987, he was hired by the Health and Physical Education Department at Northwest Campus as part-time intramurals coordinator. He also started graduate school in Maryland at Bowie State College and began studying athletic training at Salisbury State.

Gould also works as a trainer with high school teams in Queen Anne's County, Md., and with the Gallaudet Bison at home games.

Becoming a full-time athletic trainer, says Gould, "is a goal I'm pursuing that's somewhere down the road." Last year, Gould moved closer to his goal by serving on the team providing medical care to the athletes competing in the World Games for the Deaf in Christchurch, New Zealand.

"It was quite an experience," Gould said. Fortunately, there were no serious injuries at the World Games, "but I was kept very busy treating shin splints, pulled muscles, sprained ankles, and colds and sore throats."

Participating in the intramural program can be very beneficial for youth in developing confidence, teamwork, fitness, "and it definitely keeps them out of trouble!" Gould said. "I emphasize that everybody plays. It's not an all-win situation. I want to see that everybody has fun."

Chris Gould, intramural sports director at the Northwest Campus, has been voted outstanding staff person two years in a row.

Correction

In a Sept. 10 article on a Pre-College conference on ASL and deaf culture, the location of the Salk Institute of San Diego was given incorrectly. Also, in the same article, a quote by James Tucker, a speaker at the conference, should have read "... ASL has order, concepts, and fluidity, and it borrows from English."
